accompanying work titled The ferns of British India was published in 1866, and a supplement to the two works - Supplement to the ferns of southern India and British India with 45 additional plates, was published in 1876. With these works, the author provided a list of all then-known ferns from India, Ceylon (Sri Lanka), Burma (Myanmar), and the Malay Peninsula. The total number of illustrated species and varieties came to 660, solidifying Beddome's contribution to the study of Indian ferns. Richard Henry Beddome (1830-1911) was a British army officer and distinguished naturalist whose contributions to the botanical and zoological sciences were pivotal in 19th-century colonial India. Rare and important speech given in Goa in October 1641 on the occasion of the restauration of Portuguese independence and the end of the Iberian Union

Deputado do S. Officio, & das Ordens Militares .. 1642. Small 4to (20 x 15 cm). Rare Lisbon printing, after the elusive first edition printed in Goa (1641), of a speech given in Goa in October 1640, on the occasion of the formal recognition of the new King of Portugal, João IV and his son and heir Prince Teodósio. The speech was delivered by the distinguished Dominican Friar and theologian Fr. Manoel da Cruz. His dates of birth and death are unknown;

Innocencio mentions the date (7 March 1598) he professed his vows into the order and evidently he was still alive in 1641 to deliver the speech presented in the present publication. Da Cruz sea, 1822-1823]. 3 volumes. 8vo.

A neatly-written and illustrated sea journal kept by James Dudman, the second mate on board the East India Company's ship Winchelsea during a 1822-23 voyage to India. Launched in

1803, the Winchelsea was already a veteran East Indiaman, this being her ninth voyage she made a total of eleven voyages for the EIC before she was broken up in 1834. On the present voyage, commanded by Captain William Adamson, she carried 592 people, including the 17th and 44th Regiments of Foot and detachments of the King's and EIC's soldiers, and a number of women and children. The sea journal volume is accompanied by two additional volumes by Dudman containing pencil sketches of unidentified masted sailing vessels. More information and images.

single source on Raj-based military frontier operations carried out up to the First World War. The work was first compiled in 1873 by Colonel W. H. Paget as A record of expeditions against the North-West Frontier tribes, with the intention of providing a "valuable guide" to such British commanders and policymakers as "might have future dealings with these turbulent neighbours". It was revised in 1884

by A. H. Mason of the Royal Engineers. Three decades later, the frontiers of British influence had vastly expanded: they now reached to the borders of Afghanistan and Persia, and a newly compiled record of expeditions was urgently required.
